It is your generosity that fuels our collective future.

The Columbus Foundation was founded on the premise of bringing passionate, generous people from all walks of life together to create a better community.

Nearly 75 years later, this goal is still top of mind. And today, we recognize that you choose to do more, be more, and give more—making a conscious decision to help lift others through your charitable giving.

Generosity is more than a one-time act of kindness. It is the daily practice of bettering the lives of those around you and strengthening the community in which you live.

The Columbus Foundation thanks you—for the investments you make that will yield returns for years to come. We are proud to partner with you to build a strong, connected community for all.

#MoreGenerous

Dear Friends,

As London-based stockbroker Nicholas Winton prepared for his skiing vacation in December of 1938, a friend in Czechoslovakia sent him an urgent plea for help. A German invasion was imminent and Czech refugee camps were filled to capacity with Jewish children, all of whom would be sent to concentration camps once the Nazis seized power.

Winton quickly went to work, organizing an escape plan with key partners in Prague to get the children to safety. He spent every spare moment either raising money for transport or finding foster homes for the children once they arrived in the United Kingdom. On March 14, 1939, the day before the Nazis crossed the Czech border, a transport of children left Prague for London. While Nicholas could have stopped there, he chose to do more. He organized seven additional transports, saving more than 650 children in all.

Like Winton, Harrison Sayre and a group of forward-thinking leaders asked themselves what they could do to better the lives of others. In 1943, as central Ohio struggled through the daily worries, fears, and losses of World War II while living with the lingering effects of the Great Depression, Sayre knew that a few acts of kindness would not be enough—he needed to do more. Thus, The Columbus Foundation was established, and with it, a tradition of its donors, volunteers, and staff going above and beyond for the community.

This tradition continued through 2017 as the Foundation and its donors gave more than ever to support nonprofits improving central Ohio. Grants paid reached a remarkable all-time high of $213 million to benefit more than 3,900 nonprofits and the hundreds of thousands of individuals they serve. Since our founding, the Foundation has awarded $2.27 billion in grants to a wide range of causes, including social services, the arts, health, education, and more.

Your generous gifts and the bequests received in 2017 totaled $205.3 million—the fourth highest annual amount of gifts received in our history. These gifts created new funds and added to existing funds and foundations held at The Columbus Foundation, Supporting Foundations, and our affiliate, Community Foundations, Inc. A total of 188 new charitable funds were created by generous individuals, families, nonprofit organizations, and businesses—and each fund, uniquely named by the donor, represents their diverse interests, goals, and hopes. As of December 31, 2017, the assets of the Foundation stood at $2.27 billion held in 2,587 charitable funds and 30 Supporting Foundations.

Companies in central Ohio also went above and beyond to provide for their employees through the Foundation's Emergency Assistance Program (EAP), which launched in 2017. Tailored to each individual business, EAPs are funds that provide grants for food, shelter, and other basic needs directly to employees experiencing financial hardship due to an unexpected personal crisis.

From your participation in The Big Give, the Foundation's online giving rally that leveraged $18 million for 906 nonprofits in just 26 hours, to leading conversations at The Big Table, a day of community building where more than 5,000 people came together to strengthen and connect central Ohio through dialogue, your generosity demonstrated your commitment to creating a better tomorrow.

The Foundation matches your commitment and strives to make community knowledge accessible for residents and visitors alike.

Better Together is the Foundation's new crowdfunding platform in The Giving Store that brings the community together to fulfill critical needs of local nonprofits. Completed projects include creating a dedicated space for seniors to socialize and enjoy activities at the Clintonville-Beechwood Community Resources Center and transforming a drive-through into the Community Development for All People's Fresh Market, which provides free produce and perishables to thousands on Columbus' South Side.

Thank you to our exceptional Governing Committee for its leadership. We welcomed George S. Barrett, who was elected to serve a seven-year term, and offered our gratitude to David P. Blom, who completed his term of service in 2017. The accomplishments of the past year also reflect the efforts of our committee volunteers, professional advisors, and dedicated staff.

During 2017, Amy Acton, M.D., M.P.H. and Matthew Martin joined the Foundation as Community Research and Grants Management Officers, while Kelly Schleppi came on board as Senior Financial Reporting Accountant. In December, our esteemed colleague Carol M. Harmon, Vice President of Marketing and Communications, retired after serving with distinction for 26 years. We thank her for her exemplary service.

The Columbus Foundation embraces philanthropy as a collaborative practice. Thank you for partnering with us to strengthen central Ohio for generations to come, and for recognizing and celebrating those who had the heart, courage, and foresight to establish this foundation.

By continuing the tradition of going above and beyond to support those in need, you demonstrate that Columbus has been and will always be a #MoreGenerous community.

“I think it’s really important that everyone understands they do have a seat at the table and, regardless of identity or difference, they do belong.”

—ANDREW LEVITT

Generosity embraces belonging

Andrew Levitt has a booming voice and a big heart to match. From volunteer opportunities and service projects in high school and college, to becoming involved in the community during his adult life, helping others was, and is, an important part of what makes him who he is today.

A native of North Canton and graduate of Denison University’s theater program, Andrew has called Columbus home since 2001. Looking for an opportunity to be onstage, his friend, drag queen Virginia West, suggested he try drag.

“I think I saw an opportunity to use my platform to provide a voice for those who needed it,” Andrew said. “When I started, I didn’t see myself in the current culture of drag. I wanted to allow people who were like me to know they also had a place in it as well.”

Nina West, Andrew’s drag persona, is truly just an extension of himself.

“Nina is a funny, witty, sassy, larger than life, big kid at heart,” Andrew said. “She’s not different than I am. She’s a part of me. She’s just louder and larger. It’s just me on a different scale.”

Nina West has grown into a legendary figure, allowing Andrew to use his platform to support LGBTQ organizations. He’s done thousands of shows, participates in hundreds of appearances each year, and has given generously in time, talent, and treasure to the community. The charity performance he does at the end of each big show averages about $1,500—an incredible testament to his passion, and the generosity of his audience.

“It’s mind-blowing to know how giving people are. It’s just amazing to me,” he said. “Columbus is a really giving community and it speaks to how close-knit and tight our LGBTQ community is.”

In 2015, Andrew established The Nina West Fund at The Columbus Foundation to support local nonprofits that provide services for the LGBTQ community, including Kaleidoscope Youth Center, which has a special place in Andrew’s heart.

“I think part of the reason why an organization like Kaleidoscope has resonated with me is because that kind of resource wasn’t available when I was struggling with coming out and telling people who I was,” Andrew said.

In addition to Kaleidoscope, his fund has helped support the Ronald McDonald House, Equitas Health, Planned Parenthood, Family Pride Network, and the ACLU.

“I keep my giving located in central Ohio so I can see the dollars that people give go to work firsthand,” he said. “That’s important for me.”

While he loves his life onstage, Andrew also appreciates the role he plays in the broader community.

“One of my favorite things about what I do, now more than ever, is making a connection with families, kids, and LGBTQ families and their children,” Andrew said. “I did a library reading at Westerville Public Library. Giving families access to the art of drag is pretty powerful and awesome.”

“The Columbus Foundation supports organizations that we believe in.”

—DOROTHY BEEHNER

Generosity shapes the future

In 2006, a chance to help those affected by Hurricane Katrina sparked a passion for giving back in Rod and Dorothy Beehner that continues today.

A neighbor asked the couple to travel with her and other realtors to Louisiana to help in the rebuilding efforts a year after Hurricane Katrina. Both Rod and Dorothy enjoy working with their hands, and they appreciate the camaraderie of doing projects with others. They joined the group, and ended up in Slidell, about 30 miles northeast of New Orleans, across Lake Pontchartrain, building a house with Habitat for Humanity.

“At that time, Slidell was still not back to pre-Katrina. There were a lot of housing needs,” Rod said.

The first house they worked on helped reunite a family that had been scattered since the hurricane hit. The next year, on what became an annual trip to help those in Slidell, they drove back through the neighborhood and were excited to see Halloween decorations up and bicycles in the yard.

“A week doesn’t mean much, but it adds up,” Dorothy said. “It’s really cool to go back and see the houses we’ve worked on and talk to the people.”

The couple, married 36 years, was bitten by the travel bug early.

“We started Labor Day after we got engaged and we haven’t stopped traveling since,” Dorothy said.

“We spent a month traveling around Europe for our honeymoon and then 20 years driving around the country, sleeping on the floor of our minivan.”

They upgraded to a small RV a few years back, which has everything they need as they continue their road trips. Rod and Dorothy do a lot of overseas travel as well.

A retired federal employee, Dorothy volunteers at Riverside Methodist Hospital, and has donated her time to the Physicians Free Clinic for 16 years.

“The Physicians Free Clinic does amazing work. If you need it, they get it done for you. You get done at the end of the day there and you feel like you’ve done something. They are a big, important part of what I do,” she said.

Rod, an architect, started a cabinetry business following his retirement in 2004 and has been doing various woodworking projects for the past 10 years. His beautiful work, from tables and chairs to ornamental pieces, can be seen throughout the couple’s home.

The fund that will be established by their estate, the Dorothy S. and Rodney L. Beehner Fund, will directly support an organization they care about, and will also be devoted to unrestricted grantmaking by the Foundation. Unrestricted grantmaking provides the Foundation with the flexibility to respond to changing and emerging needs and opportunities in the central Ohio community.

“Don’t let others define you;
define yourself.”

—DWIGHT SMITH

Generosity inspires greatness

There’s a saying that hangs on the wall of Dwight Smith’s home office. Our children’s lives are in our hands. Our future is in their hands. Not far from that is a map of the world with pins where Dwight’s program, My Special Word, is changing children’s lives. The pins stretch from North America and Europe to Africa and Asia.

Dwight explains that the premise behind My Special Word is simple. Teach children about the importance of positive, encouraging, inspiring words—and have them choose a word that describes them. My Special Word puts the power of words in the hands of the children themselves—how do they want to be seen?

Used in schools, camps, and afterschool programs, My Special Word addresses the negativity in today’s world and empowers children to take action, defining themselves first.

“I want to have young people stand up with pride and excitement and say ‘this is who I am.’ And then I want to catch them living out their word,” Dwight said.

In 2016, Dwight and his wife Renée established the My Special Word Fund at The Columbus Foundation to help cover the cost of the program for those who participate. Many friends have donated to the fund, allowing it to expand to reach children around the world.

In 2017, a picture book, My Special Word, and the first in a series of chapter books, What’s My Word, were released, and 20 partners shared the program, including The 2nd and 7 Foundation, KIPP Columbus, United Schools Network, Big Brothers Big Sisters of Central Ohio, and Boys & Girls Clubs of Columbus.

“The idea is that we can create a conversation in a non-intimidating fashion,” Dwight said. “I believe in general that if we change the words we use, we can change the conversations. If we change the conversations, we can change behaviors. And if we change behaviors, we can change the world.”

As the program continues to expand, Dwight hopes the roots of the program grow deep.

“I want to reach as many children as I can in as meaningful a way as possible. It’s not just broad, but it’s deep. I want kids to get so excited that they want to tell their stories to others.”

What’s Dwight’s Special Word?

SOLD “S stands for silence (be careful with the words you use); O stands for obedience and I desire to be obedient to Christ; L stands for leverage—to whom much is given, much is required; and D stands for discipline.”

“This fund is a vehicle that allows us to help good, hardworking people if something unfortunate happens.”

—MARK DeBELLIS

Generosity is a helping hand

Mark DeBellis wants to see his employees succeed—not just now, but later in life. He stresses the importance of looking to the future, and it’s rubbing off on his 80 employees. His Gahanna-based company, Suburban Steel Supply, has a 100 percent participation in the company’s 401K, and he regularly provides resources on financial literacy.

But, even with the best of planning, things can go wrong. Mark has seen his employees struggle when a car breaks down, a spouse loses their job, or someone in their family becomes ill. The company’s CFO, Jenny Demko, heard about the Emergency Assistance Program at The Columbus Foundation and suggested the company consider establishing a program to help employees in need.

The DeBellis Family Foundation – Suburban Steel Supply Emergency Assistance Fund was established to support eligible employees who experience financial difficulties from an unexpected emergency hardship or qualified disaster. Employees can apply online through The Columbus Foundation, or access an application to submit via email, fax, or mail. Applications are reviewed by program administrators who are part of the Foundation staff. The employee remains anonymous to the company. If approved, grants from $250–$2,500 for food, shelter, and other basic needs are awarded.

“This program that the Foundation offers is just perfect for us,” Mark said. “It allowed us to say ‘if something bad happens to you, we can help so it doesn’t spiral into something worse.’”

Mark and Cindy DeBellis grew up in Columbus. High school sweethearts, they married in 1979. “The world wasn’t as big to us then,” Mark laughed. But, he said, moving was never appealing to them. They love Columbus and are proud to call it home. They raised two sons, both now involved in the family business, and still have a large extended family in the area.

After starting his career at the Federal Reserve Bank, Mark worked for Borden and then joined Crane Plastics in 1983. When Crane acquired Suburban Supply Steel in 1995, leaders at Crane felt Mark had the right skill set and gave him the opportunity to run the new business. He worked for Crane until he purchased Suburban Supply in 2012.

Mark credits two men for providing inspiration on the importance of being charitable—his father and Jim Crane.

“Both of them have lived this philosophy—a major reason to be successful is to help others.”

Mark hopes grants from the fund will help employees overcome the speed bumps life offers, and that they in turn will help others when they can.

“Our goal is to impact these 80 people in the hopes they will impact another 160 people—we’re going to do it from the ground up,” Mark said. “We would like this business to be family-owned, family-controlled, and wouldn’t it be nice if, in many years, when we are long gone, we are still able to help people who are working here.”

“We grew up understanding the importance of helping others.”

—FRANCIE HENRY

Generosity's roots run deep

Jim and Francie Henry both grew up in modest, middle class families where helping others was not the exception, but the norm. With strong, diverse cultures (Jim is Scottish/Irish and Francie is Greek) they gravitate toward supporting nonprofit organizations that appreciate gender, cultural, and ethnic differences.

“We were always taught these differences are what provide the spirit and vitality of a community,” Francie said.

Immigrants from Greece, Francie's parents settled in Mt. Vernon, Ohio, where her mother and father owned a restaurant.

“We didn't have a lot, but we were taught there's always a way to use your talents to give back to those less fortunate,” Francie said. “The church was important to us, and our car always smelled like Greek chicken and lemon potatoes because my parents would cook all the time, taking food to the church for fundraisers.”

Jim, a native of Cincinnati, grew up with four siblings. His experience was similar.

“One thing I did know was the importance of contributing what we could,” he said.

Early in their careers, both worked for Fifth Third Bank in Cincinnati. They moved to Columbus in 2003 to raise their children, Charlie and Alexandra, in New Albany. Their jobs offered an opportunity to become involved in the central Ohio nonprofit community. This knowledge took Jim's career into the nonprofit world, where he worked for Children's Hunger Alliance and The Ohio State University Comprehensive Cancer Center – Arthur G. James Cancer Hospital and Richard J. Solove Research Institute.

“This involvement opened our eyes to the needs of the community, and we feel that's important to pass along to our kids. We've tried to instill in them that, as a family, we give back what we can and help others,” Jim said.

In 2016, the couple established the Jim and Francie Henry Family Fund at The Columbus Foundation to facilitate their family philanthropy. Both teenagers are actively involved in the discussions surrounding what organizations to invest in. The family's current areas of interest include behavioral health, education, the LGBTQ community, and wellness.

Today, Francie is Regional President for Fifth Third Bank, and Jim serves as Director of Sales, Great Lake Region, for SCG Fields, LLC. They are both still actively involved throughout the community, with Francie serving as chair of the Ohio Foundation of Independent Colleges Board, as a board member for Flying Horse Farms and STAR at The Ohio State University, and on the Columbus Zoo and Aquarium's Operating Board, among others. Jim serves on the Zoo Association Board and the board of Ohio Campus Compact.

The family loves Columbus, and the collaborative spirit that brings its residents together.

“That's what makes this town great. It's generous, diverse, and people rally around causes. And it's all in the right spirit, for the betterment of the community we live and work in, and for the next generation,” Francie said.

BIGGEST TOTAL YET!

The Big Give, The Columbus Foundation's signature community giving event, was held on October 10–11 to support area nonprofits. The 26-hour online event leveraged an incredible $18,003,826 to support 906 central Ohio nonprofits.

A record 30,279 donations were received. Donations came from 49 states, the District of Columbia, and 7 countries.

All donations received during The Big Give were eligible for Bonus Pool Funds on a pro rata basis, giving everyone who participated the opportunity to have their donation(s) amplified. In addition, all credit card fees were covered by The Columbus Foundation, so 100 percent of donations went directly to the nonprofits.

BIGGER REACH THAN EVER

For the first time, The Big Give was expanded beyond Franklin County to include nine additional central Ohio counties in the

“The Big Give inspires kindness, generosity, and lively conversation across our community. Cathy and I love the opportunity to be part of lifting up the critical work of our region's nonprofits. And, it provides the nonprofit community with a great platform to make their case for support.”

Metropolitan Statistical Area (MSA): Delaware, Fairfield, Hocking, Licking, Madison, Morrow, Perry, Pickaway, and Union. As a result, 172 nonprofit organizations in these counties collectively benefited from nearly $1.2 million.

BIGGER IMPACT FOR NONPROFITS

A total of 906 nonprofit organizations received donations through the 2017 Big Give. This is an incredible 54 percent increase over the number of nonprofits that received donations during the 2015 Big Give.

“We are so grateful for the generosity of the central Ohio community. Last year, Mid-Ohio Foodbank distributed enough food for 155,000 meals each and every day—half of which was fresh. Yet, there is still a gap across our neighborhoods, including one in four children who do not know where their next meal will come from. The Big Give has been a powerful partnership within the community to help fill that gap. On behalf of our neighbors who are struggling to make ends meet, thank you.”

WHEN THE VOICES IN OUR COMMUNITY COME TOGETHER, BIG THINGS HAPPEN

Rick Buchanan

Kathryn D Studios

“Great ideas have grown out of the conversations that happened at the first two Big Tables, but the most important thing that has come from those conversations so far is the participants’ willingness to continue reaching out to the people around them.”

—KELLEY GRIESMER

On May 17, 2017, approximately 5,000 people gathered around more than 450 tables across the central Ohio region to participate in The Columbus Foundation’s second Big Table. The Big Table launched in 2016 as a way to bring people together to broaden perspectives and strengthen our community.

“The power of The Big Table is its ability to create authentic human connection. It’s a space where people can be vulnerable with each other—sharing their own unique stories and perspectives on how we can positively impact our community together,” said Kelley Griesmer, Sr. Vice President and Manager, Walter Family Philanthropy at The Columbus Foundation.

Participants of all ages discussed a wide variety of topics, from economic issues and poverty to education and human rights.

Big Tables were held at offices, homes, schools, churches, libraries, restaurants, and even at John Glenn Columbus International Airport. At the end of each conversation, participants completed commitment cards that captured ways in which they were inspired to personally better the community moving forward.

Kelley stresses The Big Table experience is as much, if not more, about listening as it is about talking.

“The idea is to walk into a conversation ready and willing to listen to what others have to say and learn from them. It’s not about needing to change your mind, but it is about a willingness to possibly broaden your perspective by listening to and learning from the perspectives and experiences of others.”

THE BIG TABLE PARTNERS

COLLABORATIVE EFFORT PROVIDES HOPE

The 55-bed Maryhaven Addiction Stabilization Center (MASC) on Columbus' South Side sits at ground zero for the opiate crisis in Franklin County.

As opiate overdoses continued to skyrocket, Shawn Holt had been Maryhaven's President and CEO for only months. Working closely with the Alcohol, Drug and Mental Health Board of Franklin County (ADAMH) and other partners on the front lines of the crisis, they came up with an idea to create an innovative new treatment option for clients battling opiate addiction.

Maryhaven was already leasing building space at 1430 South High Street, primarily to treat clients on an outpatient basis. "We took a look around and said, we can turn this into at least a 50-bed facility," Shawn said.

The partners worked together to create MASC, a center that provides immediate stabilization to those who overdose—helping cut down on the strain the crisis is putting on hospital emergency rooms, and offering an opportunity for access to care and treatment right away.

"Some of these folks would be dead today if it weren't for the center because of how rampant the crisis is and how prone people are to re-overdosing."

—ANDREW MOSS, MARYHAVEN

ADAMH reached out to others who could benefit from a stabilization center specifically designed to give clients who overdose an option other than going to the emergency room. Those partners included representatives from hospital systems and area addiction support providers, as well as the City of Columbus, Franklin County Sheriff's Office, and the Columbus Divisions of Police and Fire.

"The really nice thing was the ADAMH board served as the convener," Shawn said. "They brought together everyone they thought would touch this program. By the time it opened, everyone was on board and knew what was going on."

In January 2018, MASC opened its doors.

"I think the biggest success to date has been the collaboration with the community partners, and how much investment those partners have had," said Andrew Moss, Director of Stabilization Services for Maryhaven. "That's what's groundbreaking about this."

The Columbus Foundation awarded a grant of $150,000 to support the new center, thanks to funds raised during a Critical Need Alert at the end of 2016 created to support the needs of the community as it faces the opiate crisis. The Ingram-White Castle Foundation, a Supporting Foundation of The Columbus Foundation, also awarded a grant for $23,575 to support the effort.

"Maryhaven's role of serving the community through this center is greatly appreciated and much needed," said Dan Sharpe, Vice President for Community Research and Grants Management at The Columbus Foundation. "The center fills a gap within the prevention and treatment continuum—and serves individuals, families, and the community at a critical juncture for addiction and recovery."

The decision as to whether someone is brought directly to MASC as opposed to the emergency room following an overdose is both symptom- and condition-based, Andrew explained. If they have an uncomplicated overdose, they can come directly to the center. Some clients need to be observed in a hospital setting to make sure they are stable first. At the end of the day, it's the client's choice whether to seek treatment at MASC or be treated and released from an emergency room—at which time, many unfortunately will return to the cycle of addiction.

"We're willing to walk through that decision-making piece with the client," Andrew said. "Sometimes they come and they're on the fence and not really sure if this is for them. We offer so many different options. You aren't signing up for 30 days of treatment. You're signing up for whatever works best for you."

Andrew developed the program keeping in mind that each patient is unique, and what works for some may not work for others. "We thought it was important to have different levels of care," he said. "We wanted, in terms of medical care, to have the flexibility to be patient-centered. This is a more responsive protocol than I've seen before."

The Addiction Stabilization Center has three specific levels.

01 Admission and Triage
(4–23 hours / 5 beds available)

02 Detoxification Treatment
(3–7 days / 20 beds available)

03 Long-term Residential Services
(14+ days / 30 beds available)

"We have offered hundreds of people a different option than what they had," Shawn said.

For now, that option remains focused on hope for the future.

"There's a growing energy around the Addiction Stabilization Center. Now that people see it and it's real, people want to get even more engaged than they were before. It's momentous," Andrew said.

NEW RENOVATIONS PUT THE SPOTLIGHT ON ANIMALS

Founded in 1883, Columbus Humane, formerly known as Capital Area Humane Society, is passionate about its mission to “fight animal cruelty, help animals in need, and advocate for their well-being.”

In addition to serving as a shelter and providing veterinary care at its onsite hospital, Columbus Humane handles thousands of animal cruelty investigations each year, partnering with law enforcement agencies and departments of health, among others, to intervene and keep animals safe and healthy until they are adopted into a forever home.

The organization has been headquartered in Hilliard since 1992. With 30,000 visitors a year, a steady stream of animal lovers make their way through the doors every day. However, the building’s outdated design was inefficient and not conducive to the needs of visitors or animals.

“We had a lot of space that could be better purposed to provide good care for our animals,” said Rachel Finney, Columbus Humane’s CEO.

In December 2016, Columbus Humane’s board voted to engage an architect to begin thinking about re-envisioning the space. Five days later, the building was damaged as a result of a ruptured sprinkler pipe. A third of the building was destroyed.

Before tackling a renovation, the organization had to address rebuilding its hospital, which had been completely ruined. Re-opened in the fall of 2017, today the hospital is a state-of-the-art facility.

In early 2017, as the hospital rebuild began, Columbus Humane kicked off a capital campaign to address its other pressing needs. With a huge open entryway, and a long walk to the reception area, Rachel said visitors could be well inside the building before seeing any animals. It had the space—but needed to be reconfigured.

Construction began in February 2018 and is expected to be complete by the end of the year.

“With the renovation, animals are the showcase,” Rachel said. “It’s a much more welcoming experience for visitors, too.”

One of the most significant changes benefits cats at Columbus Humane. With the renovation, the organization is dramatically increasing the amount of square footage per cat, from a 2' x 2' stainless steel cage to almost 18-square-feet with multiple levels. This gives cats the opportunity to have sleeping spaces, eating quarters, and litter boxes in different places. They are also the centerpiece of the new entry to the building.

For dogs, the renovation means a better environment to meet and get to know their new families. The building previously had one bonding room for dogs to get to know potential new owners—now it will have five.

“We have a tremendous success rate with dog adoptions, particularly,” Rachel said. The new bonding rooms will allow the dogs and the people to focus on one another, and block out other stimuli.

In 2017, a $50,000 grant to support the capital campaign was awarded to Columbus Humane thanks to the Samuel A. Keller Fund and the Funds for Columbus, unrestricted funds comprised of donations from generous donors that help address emerging needs in the community.

“Columbus Humane is not only an adoption and medical resource, but it serves as the law enforcement and cruelty investigation entity for the community,” said Dan Sharpe, Vice President for Community Research and Grants Management at The Columbus Foundation. “The facilities need to advance and evolve with the important work of the staff and organization. The renovation will yield dividends for the animals and the humans seeking to provide their forever homes.”

CREATING A COMMUNITY THAT THRIVES ON KINDNESS

PICTURED: Kindness Matters at Otterbein launched in 2017 with the support of The Columbus Foundation's initiative Kind Columbus.

The Columbus Foundation's Kind Columbus initiative inspired thousands throughout central Ohio to cultivate kindness in 2017. In February, the Foundation teamed up with Besa and other partners for Columbus Kindness Month—culminating in more than 10,000 acts of kindness and generating more than $100,000 toward the kindness movement.

Another positive example of the kindness culture alive and well in our community in 2017 was the launch of Kindness Matters at Otterbein University.

Otterbein's Kindness Matters initiative, made possible with support from Kind Columbus, gives students and faculty on its Westerville campus opportunities to showcase kindness in their everyday lives—and encourages others to make an effort to practice kindness.

As one of the lead universities in this regional kindness effort, Otterbein's pledge is that its students, alumni, donors, friends, and employees will help realize gifts and acts of kindness that make a difference.

The campus community has shown kindness through efforts big and small.

At its annual Welcome Week "President's Convocation," more than 300 plants featuring messages of kindness were given to faculty and staff—with a request to give the kindness away to another colleague, acquaintance, or neighbor. The kindness rippled from the start because a local greenhouse owner and alumnus donated the flowers.

The kindness continued through Welcome Week as incoming, first-year Otterbein students received hand-written notes from members of six different Westerville church congregations to personally welcome the students to their new community.

"I remember feeling very welcomed and encouraged by the kind and meaningful notes we received. It meant so much to me that people took time to write to people they had never met. Their kind words even encouraged me and many others to carry out our own acts of kindness throughout the year,” said Megan Rumbalski, Class of 2021.

Many other kindness-centered events and programs have occurred since Kindness Matters launched in spring 2017. From letters to veterans and kindness bookmarks to hosting a student-organized penny war to raise money for a memorial scholarship fund and a pop-up burrito drive to support food pantry donations, Otterbein’s focus on elevating and encouraging kindness is an inspiration to the entire central Ohio community.

Kindness Matters distributed more than 300 plants to faculty and staff during Otterbein University’s Welcome Week in 2017.

A Kindness Think Tank, held at Otterbein in October, brought together high school and college students, Otterbein employees, and community members for sessions that revolved around kindness in classrooms, neighborhoods, and how to harness kindness for the good of others.

“Otterbein is an institution where our students actually talk about kindness, are proud that their institution celebrates kindness, and understand that it’s part of our identity, our character, and our DNA. Compassion, servant leadership, and an outward-focused commitment to others are traits woven into Otterbein’s moral fabric,” said Kathy A. Krendl, Ph.D., Otterbein President Emerita.

WHAT IS KIND COLUMBUS?

The mission of Kind Columbus, an initiative of The Columbus Foundation, is to build community through the power of unconditional acts of kindness. By amplifying and enabling empathetic and compassionate actions, Kind Columbus will create a ripple effect of kindness that continuously inspires and fuels community members to do more good for each other and the community at large.

To learn more about Kind Columbus, the terrific acts of Kindness happening in central Ohio, and how you can become involved with the Kindness movement, follow us on Facebook at Kind Columbus.

2017 Financial Summary

The Columbus Foundation serves as Your Trusted Philanthropic Advisor® to individuals, families, and businesses that have created unique funds and planned gifts to make a difference through the most effective philanthropy possible. For nearly 75 years, donors have invested strategically to improve their communities and the lives of others.

We are pleased to present to you this financial summary for The Columbus Foundation. Within these pages, you will notice 2017 was another year of tremendous growth for the Foundation.

The combined assets of The Columbus Foundation and its related entities grew to $2.27 billion on the strength of impressive investment returns, as 2017 was a strong year of performance for the equity markets. In addition, another robust gift year further contributed to the asset growth, as gifts totaled over $200 million, the fourth-largest gift year on record.

Equally impressive are the grants distributed. For the second consecutive year, the Foundation awarded more than $200 million in grants to area nonprofits and the broader nonprofit community.

We continue to do this with one of the most efficient and lean organizations within the community foundation field, as Foundation operating expenses make up just .43 percent of total assets. This continues to be one of the lowest rates amongst similarly sized community foundations.

The financial stewardship over our donor gifts and contributions remains central to what we do. The prudent, conservative financial management of assets is fundamental to our operating philosophy, along with a commitment to efficient services and financial responsibility, and we will continue to strive to make that our priority.

Respectfully,
