About Our Grantmaking:
The Columbus Foundation administers thousands of grants every year. The vast majority of these grants are directed by living donors who hold Donor Advised Funds at the Foundation. These grants are not made via a competitive application process.

This guide details the grant programs that do accept competitive applications for funding consideration. While Foundation staff review grant proposals, the funds that support them are often established with instructions from the original donor to impact a specific area of interest—like the arts, environment, or education—or a specific, named, organization. These instructions and guidelines are interpreted as “donor intent.”

Ingram-White Castle Foundation, Columbus Youth Foundation, Paul G. Duke Foundation, and the Siemer Family Foundation are Supporting Foundations. Each foundation has its own board of directors that determines their grantmaking interest areas, geographic area of focus, grantmaking process, and deadlines, which differ from the grantmaking of The Columbus Foundation.

Please note, The Columbus Foundation does not connect nonprofits directly with individual donors.

Fund for Community Improvement

Funded organizations benefit from a close working relationship with Community Research and Grants Management staff. The fund supports neighborhood revitalization, as well as programs and systems that connect youth to transformative opportunities.

Fund for Innovative Operations

Supports transformative and pioneering ideas in the following categories: Fund for Financial Innovation (partnerships, acquisitions, mergers, and social enterprise); Arts & Culture (Community Arts and Major Arts); and the non-competitive category of Continuous Improvement, which focuses on strengthening, bringing to scale, and building the capacity of select nonprofit organizations.

Fund for Targeted Needs

Supports a wide variety of donor interests, including health, animal welfare, community improvement, conservation, youth development, substance abuse, special populations, and more.

Fund for Civic and Community

This non-competitive grant category is positioned to respond to unique community needs and supports initiatives and activities that improve and strengthen our community.
